State Banks-The Chicago Plank.

The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette says: The Democratic State-bank wild-cat money plank in their platform is loose at both ends, and the leaders would be glad of a chance to

It all over the Union on Sunday. For other reasons he ought not to do so. A great was a declaration which the people had not authorized to be made. However, there are a good many Democrats who are day and not on Monday. They have no Monday edition. All such papers would not at all disgruntled because of that the letter of acceptance of Mr. Harrison. We trust that Mr. Harrison will hurry up Certainly it would be better to divorce the banks from the government, State and national, if it could be done. But the his letter. Mr. CLEVELAND'S letter of ac-Democrats of whom our Cincinnati ceptance will very soon follow Mr. HARRIcontemporary speaks have been too alarmed. There is no doubt from, or at any rate, we hope he will. that the present admirable system of banking, or rather of providing the people with a good, sound currency, commends itself to the support of all thinking men, and is too good to be thrown away in the mere hope of getting a better one. Let us get a better system first and then dismiss the present system as having served its generation and proved taelf worthy of the praise which has be en bestowed upon it. At any rate, there is no Democratic State-bank wild-eat money" in the Chicago platform. Not even the silver plank is objectionable. At any rate, readers know that he holds to the opinion it ought not to be, even to the most prejudiced monogotallist. What our Cincinnati contemporary speaks of in contemptuous terms we have quoted is the declaration in favor of the repeal of the national tax on the notes of State banks used as currency by national banks. This tax was levied in the interest of the national banking system. and was intended to assist the Federal Government indirectly. But it is a tax which has served to drive out of the channels of money all the wild-cat currency which before the levying of that tax was to be found wherever you did not need it nor want it, and was a constant source of trouble to all persons having anything to do with banks and bankers.

We say, as we have often said before, that the ideal banking system would have no direct connection with the national government, nor with the government of any State. Banking is one thing; carrying on the government is another thing. But as at present advised, we know of no other banking-system as good as the one which our national government accidentally stumbled upon some twenty-indentity of the state of the system of the state of the system of the state of the system of th five years ago, and which has raised our currency from the deplorable wild-cat condition in which it was at that time to the highest place amongst the currencies of the world.

Our Cincinnati contemporary may rest assured that as the Democrats absolutely and positively refused to divide upon the silver question, but laid down at Chicago a silver plank upon which any good Demo-erat may stand, so they will absolutely and positively refuse to divide on the currency question. But we repeat that the Chicago convention went further than the people had authorized that body to go when it declared in favor of what the Commercial-Gazette speaks of so contemptuously.

Is Protection a Mockery?

If protection does not cause the wages of the workingmen in this country to rise it is a delusion and a snare; for either protection protects or it does not. And yet the Republican platform adopted at Minneapolis, and upon which Mr. Harrison and his supporters are supposed to be standing, declares in express terms as follows:

We assert that the prices of manufactured articles of general consumption have been reluced under the operation of the tariff act of

It is manufactured articles of general consumption that the workingmen are most concerned about, for most of the workingmen are engaged in producing such articles. They need not trouble themselves about articles which are consumed by only a few persons if they can secure to themselves the market for all manufactured articles of general consumption. Is not this a self-evident proposition? And yet the Republican National Convention had the unblushing effrontery to tell the whole world in their platform that the effect of the protective tariff of 1890 was to reduce the prices of manufactured articles general consumption. Was such barefaced declaration ever before ad of? The whole theory of the Rebarefaced declaration ever before publican party as to protection is that a protective tariff raises the prices of the protected articles and so raises the wages of the workingmen. But the Minneaponis platform as above quoted asserts that so far from raising wages the McKinley bill had the effect to reduce the prices of articles of general consumption, and, naturally and unavoidably, the effect of reducing the wages of labor.

And yet that same Minneapolis Republican National Convention added to the convention adde ard of? The whole theory of the Re-above-quoted declaration the following : "We believe" that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad

Here is a dilemma. The same tariff which raises the wages of the American laborer reduces the prices of articles of general consumption. It has whichever general consumption. At or rather it de- worse untipends upon whom you are talking to whether protection protects or not. If you are a mechanic, the tariff raises your wages. If you are a farmer, the tariff reduces for you the prices of all articles of general consumption. How the mechanic and the farmer can stand side by side and each swallow the potion intended for him cach swallow the potton intended for him as if it were a panacea for all the ills of life is more than we can understand. Of what possible benefit to a mechanic can a protective tariff be which reduces his wages? And how is it possible for a tariff not to reduce his wages which his own friends say reduces the prices of all articles of general consumption?
Upon which side of this protective nestion are you aligned? Do you con-nd that protection raises the prices of articles of general consumption? Then surely you cannot believe that the same sort of protection -nay, the same protection-reduces the prices of all arti-

What Sav the Sub-Alliances?

The people await with some interest to hear what the sub-Alliances have to say regarding the action of the State Alliance
